TOLANTONGO

Tolantongo is a box canyon located in the State of Hidalgo in Mexico. It is about three-to-four hours northeast of Mexico City.

The resort is made up of three hotel complexes and heated pools near the bottom of a steep box canyon. Its main attraction is two grottos, out of which flows a small volcanically-heated river which follows the canyon floor. The large grotto chamber is about half the size of a tennis court with a ceiling of up to ten metres. Above the grotto is a "tunnel", a small cavern 15 metres deep in which warm water showers those who venture inside.

HIERVE EL AGUA

One of the most picturesque natural attractions in the Central Valleys of Oaxaca, Herve el Agua offers a unique and off-the-beat-en-path travel experience. It's a top ecotourism destination in Oaxaca, especially popular among naturalists, hikers and photographers.
